

Poise and passion meet the sensitive nerd.

ISABEL SIRAGUSA

[CATHERINE PARKER] Early 30s. Unmarried heir to Parker Plastics International. Ever the perfect daughter to her business mogul parents—Catherine grew up in Buenos Aires, went to boarding school in the UK, graduated magna cum laude from Harvard, and finished her MBA while working in management consulting. Cosmopolitan and OCD, she is more than qualified to reinvigorate the plastics business and can't wait to start. Seemingly devastated by her parents murder, Catherine struggles to plan their funeral but in reality is covering up her crime and the fact her parents were planning to name another successor. (Guest star)

[MAXINE] 28-32. First female Head Sommelier at Maison—a posh restaurant known for serving the macho establishment. While Maxine attempts to charm the businessmen with her wine fluency and professionalism she'd rather be running her own winery and their sexist comments make her question her latest career move. (Co-star)

[MICHELLE] Young professional single mom in ER waiting room. Recently went back to work at a busy PR firm after a bad divorce forced her to find health coverage for her three-year-old son's cancer treatments. A brilliant multi-tasker and slightly neurotic mother, Michelle manages to get through a client presentation while comforting to her boy and still manages to know more than the attending doctors when it comes to his treatment. (Co-Star)

[MISS BEATRICE HAWTHORNE] Late 20s. New mysterious (or maybe just shy) guest at the Cunningham's Solstice Ball. Visiting from New York to attend to her elderly aunt, Beatrice is the epitome of class and grace, and later intrigue when she disappears halfway through the party. When young Cunningham finds her hiding in the library reading Henry David Thoreau, intellectual debate ensues and sparks fly. (Guest star)
